Temporary exchange of personal objects
In collaboration with Priscilia Thénard

Temporary exchange of personal objects and stories : Each participant lent a personal object and received in exchange an object from another person. For a month, the objects were put on a shelf or hung on a wall. On the return of the object, people discovered the real story of the hosting object and the imagined one of the lending object. Personal ornaments are often related to sentimental stories, reminders of places, people or a time of life... When someone participates in the exchange, it permits the object's story to evaluate. These exchanges created coincidences, meetings, links or separations. The written texts testify.
